Asbestos, repairs close Pulliam

By Jacke Hampton
Staff Writer

Pulliam Hall will be closed for two to three years during an extensive $5 million remodeling and asbestos removal project, David F. Grobe, director of facilities planning, said Thursday.

A plan to use some classrooms during remodeling was scrapped after architects discovered asbestos had been used extensively in the building, Grobe said.

The building was built in the late 1940s, an era when asbestos was commonly used for insulation and soundproofing. It originally was a teacher-training school for students from kindergarten through high school, Grobe said. The school was phased out gradually and by 1976 it housed only University classes.

"It's our first experience with asbestos on a large scale in a building this large," Grobe said. "We had no idea it (the asbestos) was as extensive as it turned out to be. We planned to use the building some, but when we got into the asbestos and found out how extensive it was, we decided not to."

The asbestos removal would have been potentially hazardous to students if the building had been used, because large amounts of asbestos are released into the air as it is removed, he said.

While the asbestos at Pulliam Hall is not crumbling, the University has an unwritten policy to remove asbestos when buildings are remodeled, John Meister, pollution control director said.

"There are three reasons," he said. "First, I know you like to write asbestos stories, and I'm being facetious, but it does get a lot of publicity. Second, the cost of removing asbestos will go up in the future and, third, there is a good chance that due to the overreaction of the public, soon there may be a law that requires asbestos removal."

Campus asbestos no health threat, pollution head says

By Jacke Hampton
Staff Writer

The danger of asbestos exposure on campus has been overstated and poses less of a health threat than breathing cigarette smoke exhaled by another person, Pollution Control director John Meister said.

Legislation, such as the Asbestos Abatement Authority Bill that passed both the house and senate during the past session along with a $1.4 million appropriation for asbestos cleanup, is the result of the public overreacting to the threat of asbestos, Meister said.

"That's because people are overreacting to an issue that doesn't have scientific data necessary to support it," he said. "Do you smoke? Do you work in an office where people smoke? If you do, you run a far greater risk from being in an area where people are smoking than even in Morris Library where there is asbestos in general purpose areas."

Information on campuswide asbestos test results will be released after a final report is issued by the firm that did the testing. Only "bits and pieces" of information have been obtained from John A. Jurgeil and Associates, an industrial hygiene consulting firm that performed air tests, Meister said.

While there is asbestos in virtually every building on campus, 97 percent of it is in good condition and is not contaminating the air, Meister

"If you (smoke), you run a far greater risk...than even in Morris Library where there is asbestos...."

said. The asbestos is confined primarily to areas such as utility closets, which are off limits to anyone other than maintenance personnel, he said.

There is little threat because the asbestos isn't friable (isn't being released into the air), Meister said. Test results from Morris Library showed a considerable amount of airborne fibers but no asbestos, according to a report by Jurgel issued after analysis of fibers collected in air tests.

Similar tests have been conducted throughout the campus, but only preliminary results have been obtained, Meister said.

Finding low levels of asbestos in the air isn't the only consideration in determining whether the asbestos should be removed, he said. Some studies found more asbestos in the air after a removal program than was present before the asbestos cleanup began, Meister said. Other studies have proved asbestos causes health problems only at higher concentrations and greater exposure than found on campus or any public school building, he said.

Shultz fingers Casey, Poindexter in scandal

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Secretary of State George Shultz vividly described Thursday how U.S. foreign policy was spun out of control by a handful of senior officials whose deception and lies kept President Reagan ignorant of critical details of the Iran-Contra scandal.

Shultz accused CIA Director William Casey and national security adviser John Poindexter of withholding information from Reagan about the arms-for-hostages swap in hopes his communications skills would "bail them out" as the scandal unraveled in November 1986.

The highest-ranking U.S. official to address the select House-Senate committees investigating the scandal, Shultz also gave a stunning account of his own troubled times as secretary of state since 1982.

He said he threatened to resign three times since 1983, prompted by a White House "guerrilla warfare" of pettiness, back-door deals and assaults on his integrity. Reagan refused to accept his resignations.

Since becoming secretary of state, Shultz has been criticized most stridently by conservative Republicans who believe he is not tough enough to promote U.S. interests.

Shultz's testimony Thursday lifted a curtain on "brutal" administration infighting over foreign policy in general and the Iran-Contra scandal in specific.

Shultz said he, too, was kept in the dark about many details of the U.S. arms sales to Iran, and when the initiative was disclosed he became embroiled in a "battle royal" with Casey and Poindexter.

Soviet proposal includes 72 West German missiles

GENEVA (UPI) — The Soviet Union insisted Thursday that any global scrapping of ground-launched intermediate nuclear missiles must include U.S.-controlled warheads for 72 West German short-range rockets. Soviet arms negotiator Alexei Obukhov presented Moscow's new proposals to American delegates at a meeting Thursday afternoon. Speaking with reporters before the session, Obukhov confirmed that Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev is prepared to accept the "double-zero" elimination of all ground-launched short- and medium-range nuclear missiles.

N. Korea proposes 3-stage troop reductions

TOKYO (UPI) — North Korea announced Thursday it will unilaterally reduce its armed forces by 100,000 soldiers and proposed South Korea do the same and that American troops stationed there begin a gradual withdrawal. South Korea made no immediate response to the overture calling for troop reductions in three stages by both sides from 1988 to 1991 that would reduce the armies of the two Koreas to less than 100,000 men. The reductions would be accompanied by a phased withdrawal of U.S. troops from South Korea.

French destroyer bolsters presence in gulf

PARIS (UPI) — France, locked in a diplomatic war of nerves with Iran, bolstered its presence in the Persian Gulf, sending a 4,000-ton destroyer into the waterway to join three frigates assigned to protect French shipping, the defense minister said Thursday. French deployment in the Persian Gulf was prompted by an Iranian attack this month on a French container vessel.

Iran: Reflagged Kuwaiti vessels not target

BONN, West Germany (UPI) — Iranian Foreign Minister Ali Akbar Velayati said Thursday Tehran does not intend to attack reflagged Kuwaiti tankers under U.S. escort in the Persian Gulf, but warned the U.S. fleet "cannot have full security." Velayati, in Bonn for talks with West German officials, stopped short of pledging that no vessels will come under fire and said Iran would not attack ships in the gulf as long as Iraq refrains from attacking Tehran's vessels.

Reagan pledges to conquer AIDS epidemic

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan, praying that "one way or another ... we will beat this disease," went to the nation's leading AIDS research center Thursday to introduce a commission that will help map strategy against a growing epidemic. Seated with the 13-member commission he charged to examine the sensitive issues generated by the acquired immune deficiency syndrome crisis, Reagan said during a briefing at the National Institutes of Health that "more progress is coming."

Aide: innocent of ethics conflict charges

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Ex-White House aide Lyn Nofziger pleaded not guilty Thursday to six counts of breaking federal conflict-of-interest law with his lobbying for the scandal-plagued Wedtech Corp. and two other clients. The words of Nofziger, the first top administration official charged with conflict of interest violations under the ethics law and the second of President Reagan's inner circle to be indicted, hinted at his expected defense: that any illegal lobbying was unintentional and he had no criminal intent.

Study finds corporate drug tests unreliable

CHICAGO (UPI) — Many businesses are subjecting employees to drug screening tests that laboratory experts say produce unreliable results they could not reasonably defend in court, researchers reported Thursday. Between a quarter and a half of the corporate drug testing performed today either employs insufficient screening methods or inappropriate controls over access to samples and results, said Dr. Thorne Butler, a Las Vegas, Nev., toxicologist and official with the College of American Pathologists.

Pennzoil offers to negotiate Texaco legal feud

WHITE PLAINS, N.Y. (UPI) — Pennzoil Co. Thursday offered to negotiate on its $1.1 billion offer to settle the multibillion-dollar legal feud with Texaco Inc. if Pennzoil wins the right to file a Texaco reorganization plan. Houston-based Pennzoil is Texaco's largest unsecured creditor. Texaco Inc. and two financial subsidiaries filed for bankruptcy protection April 12, saying the nation's third-largest oil company was unable to reach a "reasonable" settlement of the $10.3 billion judgment won by Pennzoil in their dispute over Getty Oil Co. ownership.

Stained-glass sculptures add 'touch of class'

By Karen Wells
Staff Writer

To some people, stained glass is a thing of the Victorian period. But to one art student, it's a thing of the future.

William Beisser, who is completing the Master of Fine Arts glass program, has welded and bolted together three unusual geometrically-shaped pieces of art.

They are on exhibit through August 15 in the Communications Building main lobby, lounge and patio. The sculptures were on display in the University Museum from July 14 to July 21.

Two of the sculptures are about seven feet tall, with a third standing about three feet tall. The hand blown, two-dimensional, stained glass panels are welded into sturdy black and green iron frames. The colorful glass panels are red, purple, blue and clear, which creates an image of a rainbow when light is reflected through them. Each frame is bolted together to produce a unique geometric shape.

"We like them so much, we'd like to keep them," Deborah Johnson, secretary in the Communications and Fine Arts Dean's office, said.

When asked if CCFA Dean Keith Sanders had seen the sculptures, she said he had not only seen and admired the sculptures, "He is writing the artist a very nice thank you note right now for letting us enjoy them for the three weeks."

Beisser, who is from Dodge, Iowa, said he began plans for the sculptures about a year and a half ago. After completion, the sculptures were exhibited at the graduate preview show in November. The graduate preview show features graduate students' art work.

The use of city street maps has given Beisser direction in creating images in his glass panels, he said. A city street map of Moscow was used to create the pattern in this sculpture, he added.

The materials can be viewed from all sides and allow the viewer to look through the glass to see the traditional two-dimensional glass plates.

Beisser said he has always loved to put things together. His interest in art began when he started producing model airplanes as a child, he said. His serious work started while he was an undergraduate at Cornell College in Mount Vernon, Iowa, where he concentrated on ceramics. He entered the glass program's graduate school at SIU-C in fall 1983.

After graduation in August, Beisser plans to open his own stained-glass business with his wife in Galesburg. He also would like to teach a stained-glass class at the college level.

Bill Boyson, director of the glass program, said Beisser plans to display the sculptures in his new studio, where he hopes to sell them.

City requests water conservation

The City of Carbondale requests that residents and water customers practice water conservation measures on Friday, July 24 between 6 a.m. and 6 p.m.

While it is not necessary to curb normal water use, water users are asked to refrain from special activities such as watering lawns and throwing water balloons during these hours.

The city's raw water line on Pleasant Hill Road will be repaired on Friday in conjunction with improvements to Pleasant Hill Road now in progress.

The voluntary conservation request is only a precaution; a shortage in the available treated water supply is not expected from normal daily usage.

SIU-C should lead clean coal coalition

LET'S HOPE THAT when the University joined the Clean Coal Technology Coalition, it did so with the intention of becoming a leading member.

The University is the top coal research center in the state, and it has been considered as a site for a federal coal center. This makes the University a logical leader for the coalition.

The United States has an abundance of coal. Illinois has about one-eighth of that coal, about 30 billion tons still in the ground and 4.5 billion tons already mined. Despite all this coal easily available in our own back yard, coal remains largely unused because it is considered a dirty source of energy.

Coal in Southern Illinois is considered especially dirty because of its high sulfur content. Burning coal with a high sulfur content is linked to acid rain.

IF THE UNIVERSITY takes a leadership role in the coalition's efforts to get coal research funds from the government, there is a good chance the University will play a big role in bringing back coal as a useful source of energy.

But the University, and every other member of the coalition, needs to expand on the coalition's efforts by lobbying local legislators to approve funding not only for its own research, but for funding anywhere that can improve coal burning.

Because the University is so strong in coal research, it will hold a lot of clout when it lobbies legislators.

If coal burning can be improved to a point at which it is a viable energy source for the country, it would be a boon to coal-rich Southern Illinois.

But the University could decide to waste this opportunity and use the coalition only for public relations. This is one area, though, in which the University shouldn't just blow smoke.

Parking rules create anger

In the course of performing our routine on-campus business, many of us have run into problems regarding parking regulations.

Often our fruitless attempts to resolve these problems have resulted in bitter attitudes toward the Parking Division. Individual circumstances are considered irrelevant and subordinate to the relatively unlimited power of the division and its concern for enforcing the "regulations."

Of course, there is an appeals process that 1) assumes individuals are guilty as charged until they can prove themselves innocent, 2) is clearly dehumanizing and 3) is so lengthy and time consuming that busy people have no time to fully pursue an appeal.

Our bitter attitudes are compounded by the lack of consideration for the very people who annually pay their parking fees so they can go about their daily work. Would it be too much to ask that we be given advance notice when lots are closed?

The Parking Division is charged with being inconsiderate and causing great inconvenience to a large number of people. Should we be willing to hear its explanation?

Or should it have to go through some lengthy, humiliating process? Perhaps it should document the circumstances, in triplicate, within five business days of the offense.

The Parking Division obviously committed this travesty against us knowingly and with no considerations for the inconvenience caused by its actions. Or, could there be circumstances beyond its control? Could the division possibly be innocent as charged?

Oh well you know the rules. Prove it. —Catherine L. Davis and five others, Carbondale.

Clean Coal Coalition? Is the university for real, or is it just blowing smoke?

In the world of underage drinking, Carbondale just doesn't play fair

By Dave Wrone
Staff Writer

TALK OF MORE stringent underage drinking measures is again coming from the throat of Carbondale's City Council.

As if an automatic $300 fine upon conviction for the wicked crime of soaking your under-21-year-old tonsils with a few suds isn't bad enough, the city wants to contaminate a largely student population with an even more extensive plague of city hall hypocrisy.

Regardless of the student's financial outpouring into the community (whether it's from paying a ticker tape parade of parking tickets or simply purchasing goods in local stores), the city wants to ram an even larger pig sticker into already sorely skewed student pocketbooks.

THIS UNDERAGE drinking issue has been much-discussed in years past, with the underage population periodically yelling for a stop to the repression and the City Council yelling for more and more fine money.

The underage drinkers, of course, stand on extremely unsteady turf. Because they are, for the most part, University students (therefore considered undesirable citizens) and struggling against state law, chances for a victory in the lopsided Liquor War has never been better than hopeless.

The City Council, whose members are all of legal drinking age, refuse to waver on their view that underage drinking is bad, but that revenue money received from bars (whose patronage is largely comprised under-21ers) is really neat. The Council seems to be saying: "Well, the law says it's wrong, so it has to be wrong, but we'll let you into the bars anyway. Boy, we hope you get arrested."

IF THE COUNCIL is so concerned with preserving the moral rightness of its town, why don't they pass an ordinance prohibiting bar entry by anyone under 21? It is both unfair and hypocritical for this town to let the teenyboppers into bars when the chance of being arrested for being there and — Oh Heavens! — imbibing a little juice is always present.

You can't fault underage people for going to taverns. There isn't a whole heckuva lot to do around here if you don't have a vehicle (which many students don't). Let's see, underage people could study the entire time they aren't in class or sleeping, or they could walk five miles to the mall or theater, or they could sit around and think about what good people they are for not being in the bars, or they could visit the courtroom to watch any number of railroaded fellow students fork over big bucks for not being so good.

AND IF ALL this isn't ridiculous and unfair enough, new measures are being taken by the Egyptian Sports Center — which soon will be opening its new beer garden, supposedly the biggest in Carbondale's illustrious, liquor-scented history — to curb all this nasty underage drinking.

Before entering the establishment, patrons of legal drinking age will be issued a bracelet, similar to those worn by hospital patients. Additionally, outdoor monitors have been set up to allow management to observe the goings-on of the beer gardeners. No word has been given on the possibility of guard dogs and electric fences.

The bracelet idea is bizarre enough, yet the City Council, upon approving the center's liquor license application, voiced concern that underage drinkers might somehow be able to appropriate a 'legal' bracelet and consequently drink a beer, which would threaten the United States' entire legal structure. Maybe a tattoo would be more to their liking. 'I am a potential ex-con' would probably look pretty good engraved into an 19-year-old's forehead.

ALL OF THIS screams for social reform by way of new city legislation. To the City Council: Make up your mind. If you're going to arrest these underage scamps in your town's bars, don't let them in to begin with. If you want their money that badly, don't hassle them for spending it on liquor.

To you underage drinkers: Be prepared; the city is out there and waiting for you.

Say, buddy, could you spare $500 for a Budweiser?

The big Iran-Contra picture shows Reagan to be either a liar or a dolt

THE IRAN-CONTRA hearings have been going on for two months now and we have a pretty clear picture of the White House version of what went on. This, basically, is the story:

Anxious to make friends with some moderate Iranians, we sought help from an Iranian arms dealer who was internationally famous for being a liar, a thief and a cheat.

When we finally met the moderates, we tried to win their confidence and good will by overcharging them for weapons, lying to them and making false promises. In return we asked their help in getting American hostages in Lebanon released.

THE EXCESS MONEY from the arms sales was channeled to the Contras, the anti-government forces in Nicaragua who had been cut off by Congress and were so broke that they could not afford shoes, never mind bullets.

The President wasn't told about the diversion of funds because his chief adviser knew he would agree to it and the adviser wanted to save his boss the embarrassment of later having to admit doing such a dumb thing.

Nobody in government ever kept track of any of the money involved in the arms sales; they didn't know how much went in or went out. They preferred to leave all accounting matters to a former U.S. Air Force general who had left the service under a cloud and an Iranian-American arms merchant.

AND WHEN the whole thing blew up, and the President was going around saying he didn't know anything, nobody thought to ask any of the people involved what had happened. That's the story.

I can't believe anybody out there believes — I mean, really believes — the stories the President's men have concocted to shield their boss from damage.

Adm. John Poindexter's testimony sure backed up the President.

I don't know what Poindexter was smoking in that pipe of his, but it's got to be something besides Sir Walter Raleigh. If his story was designed to give President Reagan "plausible deniability" of the affair, you have to wonder what his version of implausible deniability would have been. Probably something that would look good in a National Enquirer headline:

"Martians Invaded My Body; Made Me Trade Arms For Hostages, Divert Funds" says Admiral.

The hearings have been difficult for the American people. They have been faced with the choice of believing their President was either lying to them or a complete dolt, one whose closest advisers won't tell him what's going on, for fear of confusing him.

According to the polls, they have chosen to believe he's lying. It is a more comfortable position. A liar can reform and tell the truth, but a dolt is a dolt forever. I suppose all of us, even his critics, succumb to some degree to that instinct to protect the President.

FOR EXAMPLE, I would never repeat that story that made the rounds a while ago. You know the one. Mr. and Mrs. Reagan are at a restaurant and the first lady orders a steak, medium well-done, and a baked potato.

"What about the vegetable?" the waiter asks.

"He'll have the same, but make the steak rare," says Mrs. Reagan.

You'll never catch me telling that story. I have too much respect for the office.

What if the victims were allowed to decide the fates of their killers?

SLATS GROBNIK said: "I've been thinking about the death penalty and maybe I have the solution to make everybody happy."

Please, that's a subject I would just as soon avoid.

"How come? You've written about it lots of times and said you're in favor of it."

I know, and all it does is arouse strong emotions I hear from people condemning me for being bloodthirsty and from those who praise me for being bloodthirsty. No matter how you look at it, I come out sounding like an aspiring hangman.

"But I have a plan, and if we can do it there won't be any more arguments about whether it's right or wrong to zap some cutthroat."

NO, THERE will always be a debate. Those who favor it believe in an eye for an eye, a tooth for a tooth. Those who oppose it say that society has no right to take a life. They believe in maybe a fingernail clipping for an eye, a tuft of hair for a tooth. And they'll never agree.

"Sure, but that's because the system is wrong."

In what way?

"Because the wrong people make the decisions on whether or not somebody should be executed. A bunch of bystanders."

What do you mean, bystanders. Our legislative branch sets the penalty. The courts impose the sentence.

"Yeah, a bunch of bystanders. The one person who ought to have something to say is never consulted."

WHO'S THAT?

"The person who is murdered."

Mike Royko

Tribune Media Services

Well, of course not. How can you consult the person who has been murdered when, quite obviously, the individual is dead?

"That's right. But my idea solves that problem."

You can speak to the dead?

"No. If I could do that I'd talk to William Casey and ask him who's running the con, Poindexter or North or Reagan. But my idea is the second best thing to talking to the dead. You want to hear about it?"

I give up, so tell me.

"All right, we got these big computers now, right? They can store up millions of pieces of information on one tiny little chip. Then you just hit a button or two and this or that comes popping up on the screen."

Yes, we all know about computer technology.

"OK. In every state, they buy a computer. And they put in a special program. I call it the Zap 'Em or Don't Zap 'Em Program."

SO A COMPUTER will decide? That's madness.

"Nah, let me finish. When they get the computer set up, then everybody goes down to their local police station and they fill out a simple form."

What kind of form.

"Two kinds. One of them says something like: 'I, Slats Grobnik, being of sound mind most of the time, hereby and whereby declare that if I am ever bumped off, and if the rat who bumped me off is caught and convicted beyond a reasonable doubt, it is my desire that he be executed, and that his last meal can't be anything tastier than a frozen TV dinner."

And the other form?

"That's for the do-gooders who stand outside prisons with candles and sing hymns when some creep finally gets his. They would get a form that says something like: 'I, Wendolyn Goodheart, being a gentle soul, do hereby and whereby declare that if I should be murdered, whether it be by gun, knife, ax, poison, choking, stomping, or being cut up in little bits and fed to piranha fish, I forgive the person who did it because he surely had a troubled childhood and ate too much junk food or had too much to drink or snort on that fatal day and did not realize what an unkind thing he did to me, and I do not want society to be so insensitive as to avenge my death with his. I would prefer he be put in prison for the rest of his natural life or until a parole board decides he has become an OK guy."

IN OTHER words, the victims decide. A fascinating idea. But it could have one flaw.

"What's that?"

Wouldn't it encourage potential fiends to seek out victims who appear to have soft hearts.

"Nah. Soft heads."

Intruders interrupt two women's sleep

Two Carbondale women were the victims of home invasion early Thursday morning, Detective Art Wright said.

A 20-year-old woman, who lives in the southwest side of town, told Carbondale police that she was awakened by someone entering her home about 3 a.m.

The woman initially thought the intruder was her roommate and called out the roommate's name. The intruder replied that he was getting a glass of water. The victim proceeded downstairs to investigate when the intruder threw a glass of water in her face. The intruder then fled, the victim told police.

The intruder is described as being in his 20s and weighing 160 to 170 pounds. He was wearing a bright colored polo shirt and dark shorts.

A 29-year-old resident of the southeast side of town scared an intruder away by shouting at him, police said. The woman told police she was awakened by someone carrying a flashlight walking around in her home. She shouted at the man and he ran away. The woman was unable to provide police with a description of the intruder.

PULLIAM,

The decision to close the building this fall has had admissions and records personnel working feverishly the past two weeks to find new classrooms for courses originally scheduled to meet this fall in Pulliam's 15 general classrooms, Harry Andrews, associate director for registration and scheduling, said.

"We'll be producing individual schedules this weekend and we want those schedules to reflect the new locations of the courses," Andrews said.

Classes scheduled for Pulliam this fall will be moved to Lenz Hall, Neely Hall, the blue barracks and Morris Library, he said.

Classes meeting at Pulliam this semester will continue to meet there, Andrews said. Remodeling is expected to begin there sometime this fall.

The first phase of the project will include removing asbestos, but also will involve a complete overhaul of the outside of the building, Grobe said. The building will get a new roof and the mortar will be replaced between bricks. Damage sustained in an earthquake in 1968 will be repaired.

A second phase will include replacing the electrical system, installing new air conditioning and replacing small plumbing fixtures, a holdover from the days the building housed small children.

Movie Guide

Adventures in Babysitting — (Varsity, PG-13) Elisabeth Shue of "The Karate Kid" discovers babysitting isn't what it's cracked up to be in this comic nightmare directed by Chris Columbus (writer of "Gremlins," "Goonies") and produced by Touchstone Films.

Beverly Hills Cop 2 — (Liberty, Murphysboro, R) Eddie Murphy and most of the cast of the original are back for more laughs and adventure, but it's not quite as fun as the first time around. Brigitte Nielsen co-stars.

Dragnet — (Saluki, PG-13) Dan Aykroyd and Tom Hanks star as Joe Friday's nephew and his new partner in this updated comedy spoof of the original '50s and '60s cop show. Directed and co-scripted by Tom Mankiewicz.

Full Metal Jacket — (University 4, R) This powerful Vietnam War drama is said to be as good or even better than "Platoon." Matthew Modine stars as Private "Joker," a Marine who narrates his experiences from boot camp training to the 1968 Tet Offensive. Produced, directed and co-scripted by Stanley Kubrick.

Innerspace — (Fox Eastgate, PG) Dennis Quaid stars as a test pilot who is miniaturized and injected into the body of a supermarket clerk (Martin Short) as part of a secret experiment in this comedy adventure directed by Joe Dante and produced by Steven Spielberg.

Jaws: The Revenge — (Saluki, PG-13) Hold on to your flotation devices. That undernourished Great White (or one of its recent offspring) is back for revenge in this fourth Jaws flick. Lorraine Gary is the only member from the original cast back for more toothy excitement, this time co-starring with Michael Caine.

La Bamba — (University 4, PG) Luis Valdez the director of "Zoot Suit," wrote and directed this biography of pop-musician Richie Valens, whose skyrocketing, late '50s career was tragically ended in a plane crash that also killed Buddy Holly and The Big Bopper. Esai Morales, Rosana De Sota and Elizabeth Pena star.

Revenge of the Nerds 2: Nerds in Paradise — (University 4, PG-13) The latest nerds comedy finds our misfit heroes invading Florida for a fraternity council convention. Robert Carradine, Curtis Armstrong and Anthony Edwards star.

The Secret of My Success — (Liberty, Murphysboro, PG-13) Michael J. Fox stars as a young business hopeful who leads a double life while rising the corporate ladder in this adventure comedy.

Snow White — (University 4, G) Walt Disney's first full-length animated feature is being re-released to celebrate its 50th anniversary. This classic is still a guaranteed kid-pleaser.

Summer School — (Varsity, PG-13) Mark Harmon of "St. Elsewhere" stars as a gym teacher who reluctantly teaches summer school to a group of less-than-eager high school students in this new comedy. Also features a dog that sits still while Mark puts a hat and sunglasses on it.

Superman IV: The Quest For Peace — (Fox Eastgate, PG) Christopher Reeve and Gene Hackman are back as the Man of Steel and the thorn in his ironlike side, Lex Luthor. Once again, Superman must save the world from certain destruction (Luthor's at it again). Margot Kidder, Mariel Hemingway and Jackie Cooper co-star.

The Untouchables — (Varsity, R) Brian De Palma directs another gangster epic, this time concerning Eliot Ness' hunt for Mafia king Al Capone. Although this is not in the league with "The Godfather," there is still plenty of bloody action, particularly when Capone (played by Robert De Niro) tees off with a baseball bat on an associate's head.

The Witches of Eastwick — (Fox Eastgate, R) Cher, Susan Sarandon, Michelle Pfeiffer and Jack Nicholson star as a trio of modern witches and a "devilish" gigolo. George Miller of "Mad Max" fame directs this entertaining adaptation of John Updike's best-selling novel. But be warned: you'll think twice about eating cherries after seeing this film.

Women's groups plan protest of pope's D.C. visit

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Women's groups said Thursday they will demonstrate at the Vatican Embassy in Washington just prior to Pope John Paul's pastoral visit to demand changes in church teaching on abortion and other women's issues.

More than two dozen women's groups, ranging from the National Organization for Women to Catholics for a Free Choice, said they will participate in the series of five protests, modeled on demonstrations at the South African Embassy by anti-apartheid activists.

The protests announced by the women's groups are set to begin Aug. 26.

Farmers get help finding jobs

By Gina Evans
Student Writer

A new project from the Department of Agribusiness Economics has been devised to help unemployed farmers find work in fields that don't have to be plowed and fertilized.

One part of the project is rural economic development, which involves studying the employment history of farmers who take part-time jobs outside of farm production.

"We're interested in the types of employment available to them," said William M.

Herr, department chairman. The department developed a farm family occupational planning guide in cooperation with the Illinois Department of Commerce and Community Affairs.

"Because farmers have to be so diversified in their skills, they are qualified to take on any number of other types of occupations," said James A. Legacy, professor of agricultural education and mechanization.

A computerized guide has been developed to allow farmers to list their skills and interests.

"The information will then be sorted out by the computer and will show a complete listing of jobs and qualifications to fit the description of each participant," Legacy said.

The guide will be available to farmers in September and will be distributed to 16 farm family counselors throughout the state.

'Panda-monium' hits as bears land in L.A.

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Two giant Chinese pandas landed safely Thursday at International Airport to an enthusiastic welcome en route to a 200-day visit at the San Diego Zoo expected to draw 1.5 million visitors.

Basi, 6, and Yuan Yuan, 7, rare pandas from the Fuzhou Zoo in southeastern China, got their first look at the United States after a 10-hour flight from Tokyo in the cargo hold of a United Airlines Boeing 747.

United has waived the shipping charge of $12,000 for the animals, which have been insured for $500,000. Flight personnel, more accustomed to handling luggage, food, flowers and furniture, turned out in force to check out their furry charges at the airport.

With reporters and camera crews jockeying for position to view the bears, one observer expressed, "It's a scene of controlled 'panda-monium.'"

The pandas and a delegation of 11 Chinese diplomats and caretakers went through U.S. Customs at plane-side as zoo officials noted their excitement at the arrival of the rare animals.

Playhouse to end season with 'Mame'

Elegant scenery, a large cast, and a huge wardrobe all hint at an elaborate finale to McLeod Theater's Summer Playhouse season in the production of one of Broadway's longest-running musicals, "Mame," opening at 8 p.m. Friday.

Bridget Wiley, who played Snookie Updegraff in the recent Summer Playhouse production of "110 in the Shade," takes the title role of Mame, a flamboyant New York socialite who — while throwing a gigantic cocktail party — is thrust into the role of guardian of her orphaned 10-year-old nephew.

The nephew, Patrick, will be played by Gabe Welding and Kenneth Lee (the latter as Patrick in manhood).

The cast also features Margaret Connelly as Vera, Mame's long-time actress friend; Beth Perry as Gooch, who brings Patrick into Mame's life; and Bryan Johnson, who becomes Mame's husband just long enough to leave his fortune to her.

Andy Cook, who seemingly has made a career of playing father roles ("Life With Father" and "Brighton Beach Memoirs"), plays the stodgy banker who tries to foil Mame's plans for educating her nephew.

Jerry Herman, a songwriter whose credits include "Hello Dolly" and "La Cage Aux Folles" wrote the music for "Mame." Songs include "Bosom Buddies," a duet with Vera and Mame, and "Open a New Window," with Mame and young Patrick.

George Pinney directs and choreographs the freewheeling capers of Mame's career over 18 years, which takes us through the 1920s and '30s.

Prof, student form music company

By Winnie Stones
Staff Writer

Songwriters and musicians who wish to have their original music published but don't have the resources may find help from TMC Music Publishing, a new business formed by three local musicians.

TMC Music Publishing is the brainchild of Harold Miller, a jazz bassist, composer and faculty member of the School of Music, and David T. Henderson, a graduate student in theory and composition. Henderson brings to the company a working knowledge of electronic musical instruments.

Miller and Henderson, though having experience in selling their songs, sought the business sense and organizational skills of Lori Ceglinski, a church organist and admissions clerk in the Allied Health Division of the School of Technical Careers.

The business was started to give exposure to the jazz and marching band music Henderson and Miller were writing, Henderson said, but they realized they had more to offer than just publishing their own songs.

TMC hopes to give exposure not only to its own music, but to music from other individuals or groups. The firm isn't limiting itself to jazz and educational music. It hopes to work with any style of music including, but not limited to, rock, country, electronic, folk, and even alternative styles such as hardcore.

The company will accept any music that is professional quality, Henderson said, emphasizing that it must bear the proper copyright markings so they can be sure it's original.

TMC's attitude toward music is shown by their motto, "Keep us in mind 'cause we keep you in mind," Ceglinski said.

Southern Illinois has recording studios, sound and light companies, and small management groups in the area, Ceglinski said. These firms deal with the performance aspect of the music business. Publishing is the key to selling songs to recording artists and record companies so they can be performed.

Ceglinski said she didn't know of any other publishing companies in the area who are willing to give musicians exposure.

The company is working mostly with printed music at the moment, but has the capability to record demo tapes using electronic instruments and computers for submission to record companies and recording artists who are looking for songs to record.

Civil Service employees receive honors for work

Southern Illinois University-Carbondale honored more than 190 of its civil service employees during the 18th annual Civil Service Awards Ceremony at the Student Center July 20.

Certificates were presented to 191 civil service employees who have worked for the University from 10 to 40 years.

SIU-C Outstanding Civil Service Employees of the Year Awards were presented to Capt. Carl B. Kirk, the assistant director of the Security Office, and to Louise Gollhier, chief clerk of the Graduate School.

as a police sergeant and was promoted to lieutenant in 1961. In 1965, he was promoted to the rank of captain. He works in the investigations section of the Security Office.

Kirk is a member of the Tri-State Law Enforcement Association, the Illinois Law Enforcement Intelligence Network and the Illinois Police Association.

Security director Robert S. Harris and fellow police officers nominated Kirk for the award. Their nominating letter said, "... His willingness to work and to help others has brought recognition to the University that is immeasurable."

As chief clerk of the Graduate School, Gollhier meets with every master's and Ph.D. student who applies for graduation. She advises them on rules, deadlines and the formats for theses and dissertations and accepts their final product. She also serves as assistant marshal at commencement.

Gollhier, of Carbondale, started as a clerk II in the Graduate School in 1965 and was promoted to chief clerk in 1980.

John H. Yopp, dean of the Graduate School, said Gollhier has helped thousands of graduate students and gone beyond her expected job duties by ... helping to conduct Graduate Council elections and assisting SIU-C chairpersons, deans and others needing information.

"As graduate school dean, I depend upon her a great deal," Yopp said. "She is truly deserving of this exceptional award."

Gollhier has helped with the University's United Way fund drives and United Health Appeals campaigns.

Television actor to visit campus for award, class

Peter Michael Goetz, who has made guest appearances on television's "Bronx Zoo," "St. Elsewhere," "Lou Grant" and "The Twilight Zone," and performed in the movies "Jumpin' Jack Flash," "King Kong Lives" and "The World According to Garp," will make a one-day visit to campus Monday.

Goetz, a 1968 master of fine arts theater department graduate, is scheduled to conduct a master acting workshop for members of the 1987 Summer Playhouse company from 11 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. Monday.

Goetz appeared in the 1966 University production of "Long Day's Journey Into Night," the first show to be performed in McLeod Theater.

In recognition of his acting achievements, the theater department plans to present Goetz with an Outstanding Theater Alumnus award at a presentation Monday evening.

Illinois Republican named to AIDS panel

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The government will inspect hospitals to ensure that medical facilities provide equipment and working conditions that protect health care workers from AIDS and hepatitis-B, officials said Thursday.

John Pendergrass, head of the Occupational Safety and Health Administration, said his agency will require strict compliance with Centers for Disease Control guidelines that previously were only advisories.

Under the program, hospitals violating the guidelines could be fined up to $10,000.

For the long term, Pendergrass said OSHA would issue a notice of advanced rulemaking to start gathering public comment on permanent rules to protect health care workers from the two highly contagious diseases.

He said he expected those rules to be in place within two years.

Pendergrass also said the enforcement effort would be accompanied by an extensive education, training and information program to ensure hospitals and their employees are fully aware of the steps they should take.

The program will be conducted jointly with the Health and Human Services Department.

While AIDS has received more publicity, officials noted hepatitis-B, a potentially fatal liver disease, appears more contagious and currently poses more of a threat to health care workers.

Labor Department statistics show roughly 2,000 health care workers contract hepatitis-B at their jobs each year. In contrast, the CDC has confirmed only three cases of hospital workers being exposed to AIDS.

The CDC guidelines generally call for health workers to use gloves, gowns, masks, goggles and other protective equipment when there is potential for exposure to infection from blood or body fluids.

Tour de France nears Paris; Irishman, Spaniard lead race

MORZINE, France (UPI) — Ireland's Stephen Roche finished second Thursday in the 22nd stage of the Tour de France cycle race and moved into strong position to overtake overall leader Pedro Delgado of Spain.

Spain's Eduardo Chozas of the Teka team came in alone to win the mountainous, 115.6-mile stage. Roche broke away on a long descent into Morzine in the Alps to finish 42 seconds behind. Delgado pedaled desperately to catch his main rival Roche and was one minute behind in third.

Roche, who began the day 29 seconds behind Delgado, was penalized 10 seconds for taking food outside the permitted zone during the stage. The 18 seconds Roche gained left him 21 seconds off Delgado's lead time, three days from the finale in Paris.

At the end of five gruelling stages in the Alps, Delgado and Roche were the only riders with a realistic chance of winning the 26-day Tour, that started July 1 in West Berlin.

The 23 teams have a hilly 140-mile stage from St. Julien-en-Genevois to Dijon Friday and a mainly flat, 23.6-mile individual time trial Saturday at Dijon before the final stage Sunday into the capital.

"I think that now, unfortunately, it will be the time trial that will decide the winner," said Roche, the Carrera team leader who dominated a flat time trial July 10 at Futuroscope. He is expected to defeat soundly PDM leader Delgado, a mountain specialist, at Dijon.

"Roche is very good on the individual time trial while I'm better in the mountains," said Delgado, the 1985 Tour of Spain champion. "Maybe if I have a really good time trial, I will have a chance. But it will be difficult."

Roche is trying to win the Tours of Italy and France in the same year. French great Bernard Hinault did it in 1982 and 1983 and Belgium's Eddy Merckx won both in 1970, 1972 and 1974.

Roche rebounded from Wednesday's stage, when he collapsed unconscious from exhaustion at the finish after chasing Delgado on a long final climb.

"I was a little worried this morning because of the state I was in yesterday," Roche said. "I thought that Delgado would try to take advantage and attack. But I felt good and I was fine all through the stage."

Chozas, who has won a stage in each of the last three Tours, all on long, solo breakaways, shot ahead on the second of three major climbs Thursday and held a more than three-minute lead going into the last long climb to Joux-Plane.

The pack scattered at the start of the climb, with Roche, his Belgian teammate Eddy Schepers, Delgado, Frenchman Jean-Francois Bernard, Colombia's Fabio Parra and Spaniard Marino Lajareta forming a lead group.

Schepers helped keep Delgado from breaking free on the climb, as he had done for two consecutive days in the Alps. At the summit, only the two Carrera riders, Delgado and Bernard, remained.

Roche shot forward with Delgado trying desperately to catch up, but failing on the treacherous, twisting mountain descent.

Lajareta, Bernard, Schepers and Parra came in at 1:09 behind Chozas. Bernard moved into third place, 4:18 back, but had two of his key teammates, Switzerland's Heinz Imboden and Niki Ruttimann, abandon on the stage.

France's Charly Mottet dropped to fourth overall, 5:54 back, and Herrera held fifth.

Former Omaha cager freaks out in Chicago

CHICAGO (UPI) — Former Creighton University basketball player Kevin Ross, who gained national attention when he abandoned college to learn how to read and write, was subdued by police Thursday after barricading himself in a hotel room.

Ross, 28, was coaxed from the hotel room by nationally prominent educator Marva Collins, head of Westside Preparatory School. Ross attended Westside after leaving Creighton with a second-grade reading level in 1982.

The incident took place just west of the Loop began about 7:30 a.m. CDT and ended about two hours later when a dozen police officers surrounded the 6-foot-9, 280-pound Ross and placed him on a stretcher when he exited his eighth-floor room at the Quality Inn.

Ross, who was taken to Cook County Hospital for psychiatric evaluation, was apparently upset that he was having trouble establishing a career and also bitter about his experiences at Creighton.

"He had these flashbacks against Creighton," Collins said. "He thought, 'My life is all screwed up and everybody else is getting their careers.'"

Ross earned an eighth-grade diploma from Westside Prep in 1983, a year after he left Creighton, and received a congratulatory telephone call from President Reagan.

Witnesses at the hotel reported hearing one shot fired, but no one was injured. Police found no gun, but they did find a holster and ammunition.

Ross also threw several items from the balcony of his room, including a television set, a dresser and an air conditioning unit. Two police cars were damaged.

Collins, who talked to Ross from a balcony adjacent to his, was visibly upset and crying after the incident.

Ross left Creighton in 1982, criticizing the university for concentrating on his basketball talent and ignoring his educational needs. Creighton officials accused Ross of lying and pulling a "big con."

Ross played at Creighton from 1978-1982, appearing in 104 games and starting nine. He averaged just fewer than four minutes and 4.2 points per game.

establish himself as a starter. As one of two veteran centers in camp, his chances of seeing more playing time in the fall increase with every snap of the ball.

"There's no doubt in my mind that I'm one of the best long-snappers in the league," Baugh said. "I hear that kind of response a lot from the coaches and it really helps build my confidence."

Baugh added that he hoped to see more playing time in areas other than special teams action.

"You can only stay around this league so long as a special teams player," Baugh said.

The Chiefs' No. 1 center, six-year veteran Rick Donnelly, pretty well established himself as the starter, but things can change quickly in the NFL.

"You never know when someone will get hurt," Baugh said. "I always have to be ready."

Kansas City has a new offensive coordinator who installed an entirely new offensive scheme. Baugh said learning the new system may hamper him a bit, but added that coaches would normally go with a seasoned player in situations where new offensive plays are involved.

"I had to learn a whole new system last year and I'm having to do it again this year," Baugh said. "The system is more complicated, but I managed to learn it with no problem and that's something not all players here are capable of. It should be to my advantage."

With a year of professional experience behind him, Baugh said the game is still pretty much the same as it was in college.

"There's a lot more mental work and preparation, a lot more stress to deal with," Baugh said. "It is a job, just like any other — you have to perform and if you don't, you're out of a job."

Baugh added that another big change was the fact that players are expendable.

"In college, a coach can work the system around a player," Baugh said. "If you don't fit the system here, they'll just find another player who can."

Another change is the

Tom Baugh, as he appeared during a Saluki scrimmage last season, before he moved on to the big leagues.

consistency of the other players.

"The players may not be that much better — they are better than in college — but the big difference is consistency here," Baugh said. "Everyone is consistent and everyone is bigger than in college."

Baugh said the veterans just reported to camp and added that practice would begin on July 25. Kansas City will play its first exhibition game Aug. 8 at the Hall of Fame Bowl in Canton, Ohio.

Baugh came to SIU-C in 1981 and redshirted his first year. He could probably have started in 1982 had it not been for early season injuries. But when then-starter Steve Piha was injured in midseason, Baugh stepped into the starting role for good. He proceeded to start every game for the rest of his collegiate career.

Sinou darts to gold, contemplates Seoul

By Darren Richardson
Staff Writer

SIU-C senior Vivian Sinou glided to an easy victory in the 1500-meter race at the Prairie State Games with a time of 4:35.84, besting her nearest competition by about 19 seconds.

"When you win the 1500 by more than 50 yards, you know there is no competition," Sinou said. "I expected it to be more competitive than it was. It's sad in a way because they spend all this money promoting the Games and don't get much interest. I don't know if it's because they're held in the middle of summer or what, but there wasn't much good competition."

Saluki women's track and field coach Don DeNoon, who headed up the open division of the women's track and field at the PSG, said the competition was there but just didn't run as well as Sinou.

Sinou said she was looking forward to the upcoming cross country season, and how she did there would determine whether or not she would try for an Olympic berth.

"It's a big leap from collegiate competition to the Olympics," Sinou said, "and this season ought to show if that's a realistic goal for me or not."

Sinou holds the outdoor 3000-meter record and five indoor track records at SIU-C, including a mark of 4:28.96 in the 1500.

Incoming Saluki freshman Rosanne Vincent placed third for the Southern Region in the 800 with a 2:18.34 mark and fifth in the 200 with a 27.14 time. Saluki junior Christiana Philippou bolted 18-8 1/2 inches to third in the long-jump event.

Carbondale native Bridget Foster, a junior at Georgia Tech, nabbed the gold for the Southern Region in the 5000 with a 18:08.53 time.

Intramural playoffs begin

By Darren Richardson
Staff Writer

The summer intramural regular season 3-on-3 basketball and 12- and 16-inch softball belongs to the record books, and the playoff pairings are set.

Basketball playoffs finish Tuesday while softball playoffs end Wednesday, weather permitting.

In the men's 3-on-3 A Division, Cusourros drew a first-round bye and will play the winner of the DeCons-Defectors clash for the championship. The championship game will be held 8 p.m. Tuesday at the Recreation Center.

The men's 3-on-3 B Division, a more crowded field, will trim down to the final four on Monday with play held from 8-9 p.m. in the Recreation Center.

The 12- and 16-inch softball playoffs, men's and coed, will be held Monday at the fields across from the Recreation Center beginning at 4 p.m.

Tuesday's action features play between the final four teams. The championship game is slated for Wednesday at 6 p.m.

Former Saluki ready, seeks start for Chiefs

By Steve Merritt
Staff Writer

Practice is about ready to begin at the Kansas City Chiefs' training camp, and former Saluki center Tom Baugh says he's optimistic about his chances of winning a starting position.

"I'm pretty happy with the way I've performed so far," Baugh said from the Chiefs' training camp in Liberty, Mo., Thursday afternoon.

Baugh said he's worked out with the rookies since mid-May, and added that it was common for centers in the NFL to report to camp early. He said he decided to report early for two reasons.

"I kind of volunteered and was kind of volunteered, but I wanted to get some extra work in anyway," Baugh said. "I thought I had a really good first week, but that was against the rookie defensive linemen — they really didn't know what they were up against."

After being drafted in the fourth round of the 1986 NFL spring draft, Baugh impressed enough coaches to land a spot on the Chiefs' roster last fall. He was the No. 1 long-snapper before a finger injury sidelined him for the latter half of the season.

This season, Baugh — in the second year of a four-year contract — is looking at the same role, but he'd like to

Saluki golf Hall-of-Famer ties for lead in U.S. Open

EDISON, N.J. (UPI) — Saluki Hall-of-Famer Dot Germain, who led the SIU-C women's golf team to its first National Collegiate Championship in 1968, sank a curling 60-foot birdie putt on the 16th hole Thursday to earn a share of the lead with Bonnie Lauer after the first round of the U.S. Open.

Germain and Lauer shot 3-under-par 69s on a steamy, sizzling day to break the women's record of 71 at the Plainfield Country Club held by Mickey Wright and Betsy Rawls.

Germain earned her share of the lead with birdies on

Nos. 14, 15 and 16, giving her six birdies for the day.

Lauer, who is 36 and a winner of two events in 13 years, was the only player in the field of 153 to complete her round without a bogey. Only six women beat par over the 6,284-yard layout.

Kathy Postlewait, with one victory since 1974, missed only one fairway in shooting 70, and tied for fourth at 71 were Sandra Palmer, 1986 Rookie of the Year Jody Rosenthal and Ayako Okamoto, a three-time winner this year. Okamoto was fortunate to come away with a bogey on the last hole when her third shot landed in the fringe on the back of the green.

Temperatures soared over 100 degrees and a number of the women, including Postlewait, carried umbrellas.

"The heat is tough but you just have to plod along," Lauer said. "I'll just try not to pass out tomorrow."

Lauer, Germain, Postlewait and Palmer all benefited by playing early before the heat peaked. And potential challenges by late starters fizzled under the high sun.
